

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, April 11, 1864.
Eos. Gazette.—Among the multiplicity of correspondence from the Federal Capital, there is one important subject which seems to have escaped the pen of all writers. I refer to Washington Boarding Houses. This institution attracts the attention of all sojourners in this city. It is an object of great interest, and is fully as "peculiar" as that other "institution" which was one of the basis of social, political and religious greatness in the South. It is eagerly sought and heartily despised by every stranger who has been fortunate enough to have partaken of the rich bounties of a northern table, a taste to appreciate the culinary skill of the daughters of freedom, or a heart to feel the warm sympathies and congenial socialities which cluster around a Yankee fireside. This institution comprises probably four-fifths of the tenements of the city, and is monopolized almost wholly by the seceder relieves of F. F. V's. Almost every boarding house is kept by a Mrs. or Miss somebody dressed in black, who, when first met, enumerates the wrongs and outrages that have been perpetrated upon them and especially upon society, by the abolitionists and their President and piously believe that peace and prosperity will never be restored to the country, until Lincoln is deposed, Greeley hung, and all the Yankees killed or banished.

Every society has its aristocracy and every aristocracy has its basis or capital. With us Yankees a man is his own creator. If he occupies an eminent position, merit is usually the cause and starting point. To the argus eyes, and intelligent minds of the North, a man without merit attempting to palm himself off as eminent, or one who attempts to take a position in society on the back of some rich or eminent relative, would appear as ridiculous as a man attempting to display his equestrianism on a hobby-horse. It is different here in the south. To be really great requires labor, study, close application and thought; either of which would be vulgar, and the refined estimation of the Southerner, and as niggers can't furnish really made, this kind of commodity for their owners they discarded it entirely, and adopted "nigger" and "blood" as the basis and foundation of aristocracy. A homeopathic atom of the blood of Pocahontas coursing in the veins of a person was a sufficient passport to admit him or her into the circle of the "first families" and if to that capital he or she added ten or more niggers, he or she was regarded one of them, and took a position more or less elevated, in proportion to the number of niggers that could be brought to bear. So all that was necessary to occupy a proud and enviable position in Southern Society was to trace your origin back to some "squaw," own more or less of human beings, and although you might not possess sufficient good sense to lay the foundation of a respectable goos, or sufficient moral principle to practice law, or occupy a position in a Wisconsin Legislature; it matters not, there was no falling from grace as long as you possessed these necessary qualifications. This was the feeling, the sentiment and the theory, before the war, hence their hatred to Lincoln and the Yankees. The abolition of Slavery in the District, the Proclamation and the Confiscation acts have stripped the unfortunate F. F. V's of all their aristocratic capital, except their "squaw blood." For this they mourn, and for this they put on the weeds of woe, which accounts for their dressing in black. With this feeling rankling in their hearts, and these views honestly entertained by them, you can readily conceive that the social surroundings would not be very congenial to a northerner. Regarding us as a set of barbarians, interlopers, destitute of all those qualities which constitute the basis of Southern "refinement," and unused to luxury, our regular two meals of "hog and hominy" per day are served out to us. They seem to imagine that the honor of boarding with them, is nearly sufficient to keep a Yankee alive—too rich altogether for clerks, and men of sedentary habits, without being mixed with a very small quantity of very poorly cooked food, which, after having the best portions selected, and the choicest bits culled out for the family, for fear of giving us the dyspepsia, is served out to us twice per day at the moderate sum of eight dollars per week. Two dollars per week is calculated to cover actual expenses, and the balance for the honor of the thing. The amount of the food is usually far short of the demand, and woe to the boarder who is late to supper! An empty stomach and a hard bed at $8 per week are not very conducive to piety. In fact, the churches allow their Northern brethren, who are obliged to board for a living, to indulge in moderate profanity once or twice per day until they get acclimated. There are only five Yankee boarding houses in the city, kept by Mrs. Soidmore, of Madison, Wisconsin. Long may it wave, and may its dimensions enlarge, so as to accommodate all the Badger boys whose lot is cast in its vicinity.

Congress moves slowly. Saturdays are set apart for buncom speeches, to be printed and circulated among constituents. No bill is voted on this day, and there is seldom a quorum present. These "great speeches" which electrify the country are usually listened to by few or none of the members, and were they not printed and sent abroad at the expense of the author, the nation would never receive the benefit of the giant effort. A resolution embodying the Monroe doctrine passed the House unanimously. The constitutional abolition of slavery bill still hangs fire, to allow the mourners an opportunity of expressing their grief in the fullest terms. George Thompson, the great English advocate of freedom, who was mobbed in this country a few years since, recently spoke in the House of Representatives, to an immense audience. President Lincoln and several members of his cabinet were present. At a subsequent interview with the President, Mr. Lincoln said to him, that the paramount idea of the constitution was the preservation of the Union, and that he had never for a moment doubted the right and the power of the executive to issue a proclamation of universal emancipation whenever it was manifest, that like a patient's diseased limb, he could be saved only by amputation. Public sentiment had advanced slowly but surely. He had moved just as fast as it had seemed to him he could move and he sustained. He could not have felt justified in the emancipation issue until all other means of restoring or saving the Republic had failed, and he had no consciousness of having transcending his power. "I do not see," said he, "how any man standing in my shoes, could have done otherwise."

A most disgraceful scene occurred in the House of Representatives last Saturday. If anything was wanting before to convince the public of the treason of those who cling with tenacity to the Democratic party, in opposition to the efforts of Union men and measures to put down the rebellion, the language uttered by Democratic leaders must remove the doubt and unmask the hypocrisy of the traitorous party. In discussing the resolution of Speaker Corvax for the expulsion of Loxe, of Ohio, for treasonable language, Representative Harris said he endorsed every sentiment uttered by Mr. Long, and he would stand by the latter for weal or woe. His (Harris) was not only in favor of recognizing the southern confederacy, but acquiesced in the doctrine of secession. Fernando Wood declared that he endorsed the sentiments of Mr. Long. They could expel him if they chose. The particulars of this scene will reach you by telegraph long before you receive this. But I cannot refrain from repeating some portions of it, and also from noticing the fact that, when a vote was taken upon a resolution to expel one, and censure the other for language which would blacken the present character of Bonedict Arnold, nearly every representative calling himself a Democrat resisted its passage—or dodged it altogether. Unless I sadly misunderstand public sentiment in the loyal States, this new draft of the Democratic leaders in Congress, upon the credulity and forbearance of their followers and constituents will be strongly dishonored. Fire Wood in England.

The London Review has a description of the "pine wood" "pine wad," sold in the streets of that metropolis. The writer says: "This wood is cut to the proper lengths by powerful steam saw mills, working night and day, and then it is split and stored, in proportion to the number of niggers that could be brought to bear. So all that was necessary to occupy a proud and enviable position in Southern Society was to trace your origin back to some "squaw," own more or less of human beings, and although you might not possess sufficient good sense to lay the foundation of a respectable goos, or sufficient moral principle to practice law, or occupy a position in a Wisconsin Legislature; it matters not, there was no falling from grace as long as you possessed these necessary qualifications. DEATH OF JOHN C. RIVES.—Mr. John C. Rives, so well known to every frequenter of Washington, died at his residence near Georgetown on Sunday morning. He was sixty-one years of age and leaves a family.

The career of Mr. Rives is quite identified with the recent history of the national capital, where he took up his residence in the days of Andrew Jackson's first Presidential term, starting with Francis P. Blair the Congressional Globe. Blair was the editor and Rives the financial manager, or, as the former facetiously expressed it, Blair attended to the writing, and himself to the finance and the fighting. Mr. Rives was also considered one of the very best rifle shots in the country, and often exercised his skill for the amusement of his friends.

In politics Mr. Rives was a southern democrat, having come from a part of Kentucky where the extreme southern political views were sincerely held. But he was yet a strong Union man, and when war broke out, opposing the secession schemes of Jeff. Davis just as heartily as a generation previously he had opposed the nullification movements of Calhoun. He gave, himself, $12,000 towards equipping a loyal regiment.

In church matters Mr. Rives was very strict, and was always careful in his observance of the Sabbath. His personal character and Christian reputation were such as any man might feel proud to possess.—New York Evening Post.

GENERAL PARAGRAPHS

—There are estimated to be about seven millions of Jews in the world.
—The Legislature of Pennsylvania has decided to purchase a new Executive mansion.
—The New York Post says the prices of bonnets have advanced nearly twenty-five per cent.
—It is thought that the latest photograph of Tenneyson has a great similarity to Shakespeare.
—The lady who, at the celebrated ball in New York City, led off the dance with the Prince of Wales is dead.
—The proprietors of the New York Sun, contributed the gross receipts of their office for one day to the Sanitary Fair.
—The New York hotels have advanced their prices to $5 per diem during the Fair. This rate may seem unreasonable, but it is understood that butter will be included.
—The Binghamton Times tells of Pat. Burns, who is seventy-eight years old, and is the father of thirty children. He is living with his second wife, and is an industrious, hard-working Irishman.
—The 9th Army Corps, which has been in East Tennessee ever since General Burnside captured Knoxville, is now being transferred to the Army of the Potomac. It commenced moving several days ago. It is Burnside's old corps.
—It is estimated that the increase in the number of acres in the Southern States planted to wheat, corn and potatoes since the war broke out, is from 10,000,000 acres in 1860, to 13,950,000 in 1862, to 17,200,000 in 1863, to 20,550,000 in 1864.
—In a private letter to the editor of the Washington Republican, from the army, the writer tells a story of one of the farmers in the vicinity of Culpepper, whose possessions lay in a district where both armies have foraged. The old chap one day, while surveying carefully the streaks in the soil where his fences once stood, remarked with much feeling:
"I ain't took sides in this yer rebellion, but I'll be dog-goned if both sides ain't took me."

Consentation in a Respectable Family.

We regret to say that through the blundering of a country cousin, one of the first families in Boston was recently thrown into a state of consentation and indignation which it is impossible to describe. For a while serious consequences were apprehended, but after proper restoratives were applied, and an explanation made, the family were enabled to eat their meals with the accustomed regularity and relief. The misunderstanding was caused in a singular manner, and can, in a measure, be attributed to the number of military heroes who infest the city.
It seems that the cousin that caused this trouble is a native of Vermont, and now on a visit to his uncle in this city. One evening during the recent spell of cold weather, the only daughter of the house, a lady of seventeen, whose delicacy is a part of her nature, and whose mind was entirely above earthly things, with the exception of the opera, new dresses and a carriage, remarked one evening in the presence of her cousin and her family, without a word of warning, that she was fearful of freezing if she went to bed.
Her mother was about to utter some expression of consolation, when the cousin (rude that he was) remarked in a loud tone, so loud that every one heard him:
"Why don't you take a major to bed with you?"
There was a faint shriek, and Henrietta was observed to feel somewhat of the pluck and resolution of a soldier, however, for her grace and the careful manner in which her Caroline was adjusted.
"Wretch!" cried the father, "you have murdered my daughter with your vulgarity."
"Monster!" exclaimed the mother, "how could you? and such delicate nerves as she has, too!"
"I saw," yelled the Vermont, with a doleful look, "I didn't mean—"

"Silence sir!" cried the brother, who had attempted to obtain a commission as brigadier general and failed, only because he once belonged to a home guard and knew, therefore, too much about military affairs.
"Damn it, won't you—"
"No sir, we will not!" cried the enraged parents. "A man that recommends my daughter to—"
"But I didn't mean it!" screamed the Yankee, but no attention was paid to his words.
"She revives—she revives the shock has not killed her," the docting mother said bending over her child.
"It was a cruel blow, but you must bear up, darling."
"Damnation won't somebody listen to me!" cried the perplexed Vermont. "I didn't mean that Hen. should sleep with a real live Major—one of them malicious officers. In course I didn't. I want her to do as our girls do cold nights. They heat bricks and put them to their feet, and up in our beds the girls call 'em majoors. That's what I mean, and what's the use of a fuss about it, that's what I want to know."

"It seems that we are laboring under a mistake," said the head of the family; "but when there are young ladies in the room, I don't think I'd mention such things. The young ladies of the city are too delicate for such vulgar names."
The Vermont promised to be more careful in future, and the family are doing well.

A Model Love Letter.

The following is a copy of a letter appended to an application for a furlough, forwarded a week since to J. A. Johnston, headquarters. This application for indulgence was made for the purpose of getting leave to go to Georgia, to carry out a matrimonial engagement, and was approved by the rebel General for fifteen days. The writer's orthography is retained:
Feb. 10th, 1864.
"My Most Esteemed Friend—I am aware that you will be surprised to hear that father and mother have consented for myself and you to get married, which affords me great pleasure; for I don't feel as though I could ever give my consent to marry any other gentleman, for you know yourself that I always esteemed you higher than any one else."
"Mr. —, bear in mind—you know you once said that you never could live and so in the arms of Another man. Know is the time to prove it. I am sure that you have given their consent, thinking that you would hardly get a furlough, and that they could say it was not their fault; but I want you to take them on a surprise. I know if you love me as you say you do, you will not fail to come. Give my kindest regards to General Johnston, and tell him to be a friend to matrimony this time for my sake."

"Nothing more until I hear from you: an be assured that I shall await your arrival with the greatest anxiety."
Yours as ever, Zhu Ami, H. T. W."

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, April 11, 1864.
Ebs. Gazette.—Among the multiplicity of correspondence from the Federal Capital, there is one important subject which seems to have escaped the pen of all writers. I refer to Washington Boarding Houses. This institution attracts the attention of all sojourners in this city. It is an object of great interest, and is fully as "peculiar" as that other "institution" which was one of the basis of social, political and religious greatness in the South. It is eagerly sought and heartily despised by every stranger who has been fortunate enough to have partaken of the rich bounties of a northern table, a taste to appreciate the culinary skill of the daughters of freedom, or a heart to feel the warm sympathies and congenial sociabilities which cluster around a Yankee fireside. This institution comprises probably four-fifths of the tenements of the city, and is monopolized almost wholly by the sleek relics of F. F. V's. Almost every boarding house is kept by a Mrs. or Miss somebody dressed in black, who, when first met, enumerates the wrongs and outrages that have been perpetrated upon them and especially upon society, by the abolitionists and their President and piously believe that peace and prosperity will never be restored to the country, until Lincoln is deposed, Greeley hung, and all the Yankees killed or banished.

Every society has its aristocracy and every aristocracy has its basis or capital. With us Yankees a man is his own creator. If he occupies an eminent position, merit is usually the cause and starting point. To the argus eyes and intelligent minds of the North, a man without merit attempting to palm himself off as eminent, or one who attempts to take a position in society on the back of some rich or eminent relative, would appear as ridiculous as a man attempting to display his ostentatiousness on a hobby-horse. It is different here in the south. To be really great requires labor, study, close application and thought; either of which would be vulgar, in the refined estimation of the Southerner, and as niggers can't furnish ready-made, this kind of commodity for their owners they discarded it entirely, and adopted "nigger" and "blood" as the basis and foundation of aristocracy. A homoeopathic atom of the blood of Ponce de Leon coursing in the veins of a person was a sufficient passport to admit him or her into the circle of the "first families" and if to that capital he or she added ten or more niggers, he or she was regarded one of them, and took a position more or less elevated, in proportion to the number of niggers that could be brought to bear. So all that was necessary to occupy a proud and enviable position in Southern Society was to trace your origin back to some "squaw" own more or less of human beings, and although you might not possess sufficient good sense to lay the foundation of a respectable house, or sufficient moral principle to practice law, or occupy a position in a Wisconsin Legislature; it matters not, there was no falling from grace as long as you possessed these necessary qualifications. This was the feeling, the sentiment and the theory, before the war, hence their hatred to Lincoln and the Yankees. The abolition of Slavery in the District, the Proclamation and the Confiscation acts have stripped the unfortunate F. F. V's of all their aristocratic capital, except their "squaw blood." For this they mourn, and for this they put on the weeds of woe, which accounts for their dressing in black. With this feeling rankling in their hearts, and these views honestly entertained by them, you can readily conceive that the social surroundings would not be very congenial to a northerner. Regarding us as a set of barbarians, idlelopers, destitute of all those qualities which constitute the basis of Southern "refinement," and unused to luxury, our regular two-meals of "hog and hominy," per day, are served, out to us. They seem to imagine that the honor of boarding with them, is nearly sufficient to keep a Yankee alive—too rich altogether for clerks, and men of sedentary habits, without being mixed with a very small quantity of very poorly cooked food, which, after having the best portions selected, and the choicest bits culled out for the family, for fear of giving us the dyspepsia, is served out to us twice per day at the moderate sum of eight dollars per week. Two dollars per week is calculated to cover actual expenses, and the balance for the honor of the thing. The amount of the food is usually far short of the demand, and woe to the boarder who is late to supper! An empty stomach and a hard bed at $8 per week are not very conducive to piety. In fact, the churches allow their Northern brethren, who are obliged to board for a living, to indulge in moderate profanity once or twice per day until they get acclimated. There is one live Yankee boarding house in the city kept by Mrs. Seidmore, of Madison, Wisconsin. Long may it wane, and may its dimensions enlarge, so as to accommodate all the Badger boys whose lot is cast in its vicinity.

Congress moves slowly. Saturdays are set apart for buncombe speeches, to be printed and circulated among constituents. No bill is voted on this day, and there is seldom a quorum present. These "great speeches" which electrify the country are usually listened to by few or none of the members, and were they not printed and sent abroad at the expense of the author, the nation would never receive the benefit of the giant effort. A resolution embodying the Monroe doctrine passed the House unanimously. The constitutional abolition of slavery bill still hangs fire, to allow the mourners an opportunity of expressing their grief in the fullest terms. George Thompson, the great English advocate of freedom, who was mobbed in this country a few years since, recently spoke in the House of Representatives, to an immense audience. President Lincoln and several members of his cabinet were present. At a subsequent interview with the President, Mr. Lincoln said to him, that the paramount idea of the constitution was the preservation of the Union, and that he had never for a moment doubted the right and the power of the executive to issue a proclamation of universal emancipation whenever it was manifest, that like a patient's diseased limb, life could be saved only by amputation. Public sentiment had advanced slowly but surely. He had moved just as fast as it had seemed to him he could move, and he sustained. He could not have felt justified in the emancipation issue until all other means of restoring or saving the Republic had failed, and he had no consciousness of having transcended his power. "I do not see," said he, "how any man standing in my shoes, could have done otherwise."

A most disgraceful scene occurred in the House of Representatives last Saturday. If anything was wanting before to convince the public of the treason of those who cling with tenacity to the Democratic party, in opposition to the efforts of Union men and measures to put down the rebellion, the language uttered by Democratic leaders must remove the doubt and unmask the hypocrisy of the traitorous party. In discussing the resolution of Speaker Cor. F. F. V's for the expulsion of Long, of Ohio, for treasonable language, Representative Harris said he endorsed every sentiment uttered by Mr. Long, and he would stand by the latter for weal or woe. His (Harris) was not only in favor of recognizing the southern confederacy, but acquiesced in the doctrine of secession. Fernando Wood declared that he endorsed the sentiments of Mr. Long. They could expel him if they chose. The particulars of this scene will reach you by telegraph long before you receive this. But I cannot refrain from repeating some portions of it, and also from noticing the fact that, when a vote was taken upon a resolution to expel one, and censure the other for language which would blacken the present character of Benedict Arnold, nearly every representative calling himself a Democrat resisted its passage—or dodged it altogether. Unless I sadly misanderstand public sentiment in the loyal States, this new draft of the Democratic leaders in Congress, upon the credulity and forbearance of their followers and constituents will be strongly dishonored. Fire Wood in England.
 The London Review has a description of the "pine wood" of "pine wood" sold in the streets of that metropolis. The writer says: "This wood is cut to the proper lengths by powerful steam saw mills, working night and day, and then it is split and stored. The successful lighting of a fire depends upon a perfect dissociation of the wood as much as anything; this is obtained by drying till it becomes surrounded with a kind of gas, which leaps as it were to meet the fire applied to it. The ordinary firewood is sold in bundles, as the reader must be aware; but the "wheel" is built up to the shape of a wheel in the most ingenious manner. The builders are young girls, rows of whom are seen employed in the factory, each girl having an iron matrix in the shape of a wheel before her. Into this matrix she drops with the utmost rapidity sufficient pieces of wood to make the rim and spokes of her miniature wheel; by the aid of a lever the different parts are jammed close, lifted a little from the matrix, and tied firmly together with a string. Some of the more nimble of the girls will build thousands of these wheels during working hours. The last process is to dip them in a cauldron of boiling resin, and the patient firewood is complete. A fire cannot well go out where this pine wood is employed, as it lights with the utmost ease, burns with fury, and gives out sufficient heat to boil a kettle, by which three pints of water can be boiled in a few minutes at the cost of a farthing. Indeed a large quantity is used by bucheleers and private families for this purpose. One wheel is sufficient to kindle or light a fire in any ordinary sized stove, and at the rate they are sold, four fires may be kindled at the cost of a penny."

DEATH OF JOHN C. RIVES.—Mr. John C. Rives, so well known to every frequenter of Washington, died at his residence near Georgetown on Sunday morning. He was sixty-one years of age and leaves a family. The career of Mr. Rives is quite identified with the recent history of the national capital, where he took up his residence in the days of Andrew Jackson's administration. He was a member of the House of Representatives, and was the financial manager, or, as the former facetiously expressed it, Blair attended to the writing, and himself to the finance and the fighting. Mr. Rives was also considered one of the very best rifle shots in the country, and often exercised his skill for the amusement of his friends. In church matters Mr. Rives was very strict, and was always careful in his observance of the Sabbath. His personal character and Christian reputation were such as any man might feel proud to possess. —New York Evening Post.

DESCRIPTION OF GEORGIAN ROY.—The beautiful and once thrifty city of Rome, Ga., is situated on the neck of land between the Etowah and Oostanaula rivers, where they form a junction and empty into the ocean, which latter river is navigated by steamboats in a southerly direction for some 130 miles to the rapids in the State of Alabama. The city is regularly laid out, and contains about 4,000 inhabitants, and could you take a stand upon court house hill (which stands in the centre of the town), in the pleasant month of April, you would say a more beautiful place you would not wish to see. It covers a large space for so few inhabitants, the streets being wide, and attached to each residence (many of which are elegant) are gardens, sufficient for vegetables and shrubbery. On the main street, for at least half a mile, are located nearly all the business houses in town. Many of the stores are large and elegant, and before the war there was a heavy business done in this thrifty little city as any in the South for its size.

GENERAL PARAGRAPHS.

—There are estimated to be about seven millions of Jews in the world.
 —The Legislature of Pennsylvania has decided to purchase a new Executive mansion.
 —The New York Post says the prices of bounties have advanced nearly twenty-five per cent.
 —It is thought that the latest photograph of Tennyson has a great similarity to Shakespeare.
 —The lady who, at the celebrated ball in New York City, led off the dance with the Prince of Wales is dead.
 —The proprietors of the New York Sun, contributed the gross receipts of their office for one day to the Sanitary Fair.
 —The New York hotels have advanced their prices to $5 per diem during the Fair. This may seem unreasonable, but it is understood that butler will be included.
 —The Birmingham Times tells of Pat. Burns, who is seventy-eight years old, and is the father of thirty children. He is living with his second wife, and is an industrious, hard-working Irishman.
 —The 6th Army Corps, which has been in East Tennessee ever since General Burnside captured Knoxville, is now being transferred to the Army of the Potomac. It commenced moving several days ago. It is Burnside's old corps.
 —It is estimated that the increase in the number of acres in the Southern States planted to wheat, corn and potatoes since the war broke out, is from 10,000,000 acres in 1860, to 19,950,000 in 1862, to 17,200,000 in 1863, to 20,550,000 in 1864.

—In a private letter to the editor of the Washington Republican, from the army, the writer tells a story of one of the farmers in the vicinity of Culpepper, whose possessions lay in a district where both armies have fought. The old chap one day, while surveying ruefully the streaks in the soil where his fences once stood, remarked with much feeling: "I ain't took no sides in this yer rebellion, but I'll be dog goned if both sides ain't took me."

Consternation in a Respectable Family.
 We regret to say that through the blundering of a country cousin, one of the first families in Boston was recently thrown into a state of consternation and indignation which it is impossible to describe. For a while serious consequences were apprehended, but after proper restoratives were applied, and an explanation made, the family were enabled to eat their meals with the accustomed regularity and relief. This misunderstanding was caused in a singular manner, and can, in a measure, be attributed to the number of military heroes who infest the city. It seems that the cousin that caused this trouble is a native of Vermont, and now on a visit to an uncle in this city. One evening during the recent spell of cold weather, the only daughter of the house, a lady of seventeen, whose delicacy is a part of her nature, and whose mind was entirely above earthly things, with the exception of the opera, new dresses and a carriage, remarked one evening in the presence of her cousin and her family, without a word of warning, that she was fearful of freezing if she went to bed.

Her mother was about to utter some expression of consolation, when the cousin (indeed he was) remarked in a loud tone, so loud that every one heard him: "Why don't you take a major to bed with you?" There was a faint shriek, and Henrietta was observed to fall senseless on the plush sofa. Her position was noted, however, by its grace and the careful manner in which her caroline was adjusted. "Wretch!" cried the father, "you have murdered my daughter with your vulgarity." "Monster!" exclaimed the mother, "how could you? and such delicate nerves as she has, too!" "I swear," yelled the Vermont, with a doleful look, "I didn't mean—"

"Silence sir!" cried the brother, who had attempted to obtain a commission as brigadier general and failed, only because he once belonged to a home guard and knew, therefore, too much about military affairs. "Damn it, won't you—"

"No sir, we will not," cried the enraged parents. "A man that recommends my daughter to bed with a major!" "But I didn't mean it—" screamed the Yankee, but no attention was paid to his words. "She revives—she revives the shock has not killed her," the doting mother said bending over her child. "It was a cruel blow, but you must bear up, darling."

"Damnation won't somebody listen to me!" cried the perplexed Vermont. "I didn't mean that Ilen, should sleep with a real live Major—one of them malicious officers. In course I didn't. I want her to do as our gals do nights. They heat bricks and put them to their feet, and in our parts the gals call 'em majors. That's what I mean, and what's the use of a fuss about it, that's what I want to know."

Fall of a Bridge.

At about ten o'clock yesterday morning, the truss bridge of the Cumminsville avenue, over Mill creek, at Cumminsville, gave away and fell to the bed of the creek, a complete wreck. At the time of the accident one of the street cars of the Avenue road, containing a large number of passengers, was slowly crossing the structure, going north. The bridge was sixty feet in length and sixteen feet above the water, which is quite shallow at that point. In falling, the bridge settled quite slowly at first, the middle portion of the flooring sagging somewhat, as the heavy timbers cracked and gave way. As the flooring timbers crashed down upon the bed of the stream, the street car, kept its position on the track—while its load of human beings, although severely jolted and frightened, almost all escaped uninjured. Even the horse was uninjured. With the flooring, of course, came the upper works of the bridge, and although that shows but few marks of damage. A number of ladies, being strangers here, were taking a ride out to the cemetery. The only person injured was a Mr. James Rice, who resides on Front street, and who, by the severe jolting, suffered an injury to a wound sustained from a piece of shell while he was in the army.

When we visited the scene of the accident, yesterday afternoon, a crowd of persons from Cumminsville and the city were gathered around the wreck, commenting in tones of wonder upon the fortunate escape of the parties in the car. It seems, indeed, wonderful, that any of them should have escaped uninjured.—Gen. Com. 11th.

GOTTSCALK ON KNABE.

(Translated from the French.)

After having played on the Piano of Messrs. Knabe & Co., it is impossible not to bear testimony to their superior quality, which have secured for them the eminent reputation which they enjoy. The Pianos of their manufacture, on which I have played, are exceedingly remarkable for their quality. They have the power of about half tone, and the upper notes sweet, clear and harmoniously mellow, (chordal) and I do not hesitate to express in words the fact that they are superior to the best manufactured in Europe, or this country by the most celebrated makers. I am signed, L. M. GOTTSCALK.

We would call the attention of all lovers of music to a new instrument which we have just received called the

New American Organ.

S. B. & H. W. Smith, sole manufacturers of the New American Organ, with tremolo attachment, finished in different styles, in elegant polished rosewood, or in mahogany, and also in white pine, and are for sale at the music store of
